CHANGES IN THE COLUMBIA LAW SCHOOL.—Professor John W. Houston has resigned his chair on account of ill health. His retirement is cause for regret throughout the school, and more particularly among the large body of men to whom he has accorded at all times the most generous personal assistance. The Editors of this REVIEW owe Professor Houston an especial debt of gratitude for the readiness with which he has held at their disposal his great learning and quick practical judgment.

Professor Henry S. Redfield, A. M., who will succeed Professor Houston in the Faculty of Law, was born in 1851, graduated from Amherst in the Class of '77, and after twenty years' practice at Elmira became Professor of Practice and Procedure at Cornell in 1898. Professor Redfield will present a course in pleading and practice extending through the three years, which will combine the various subjects properly included under that general head but heretofore taught separately in the school, Wills, the Administration of Estates and some work in Surrogate's Practice.

The first-year class next fall will have an election between the regular course in Criminal Law and a new course offered by Professor Burgess on American Constitutional Law in its Historical Development. The latter course is intended as an introduction to the second-year courses in constitutional law, to which next year Professor Burgess will add a course devoted to the study of private rights under the Constitution of the United States, as expounded by judicial decision.

The course in Bailments and Carriers will be given by Mr. Harlan F. Stone.
